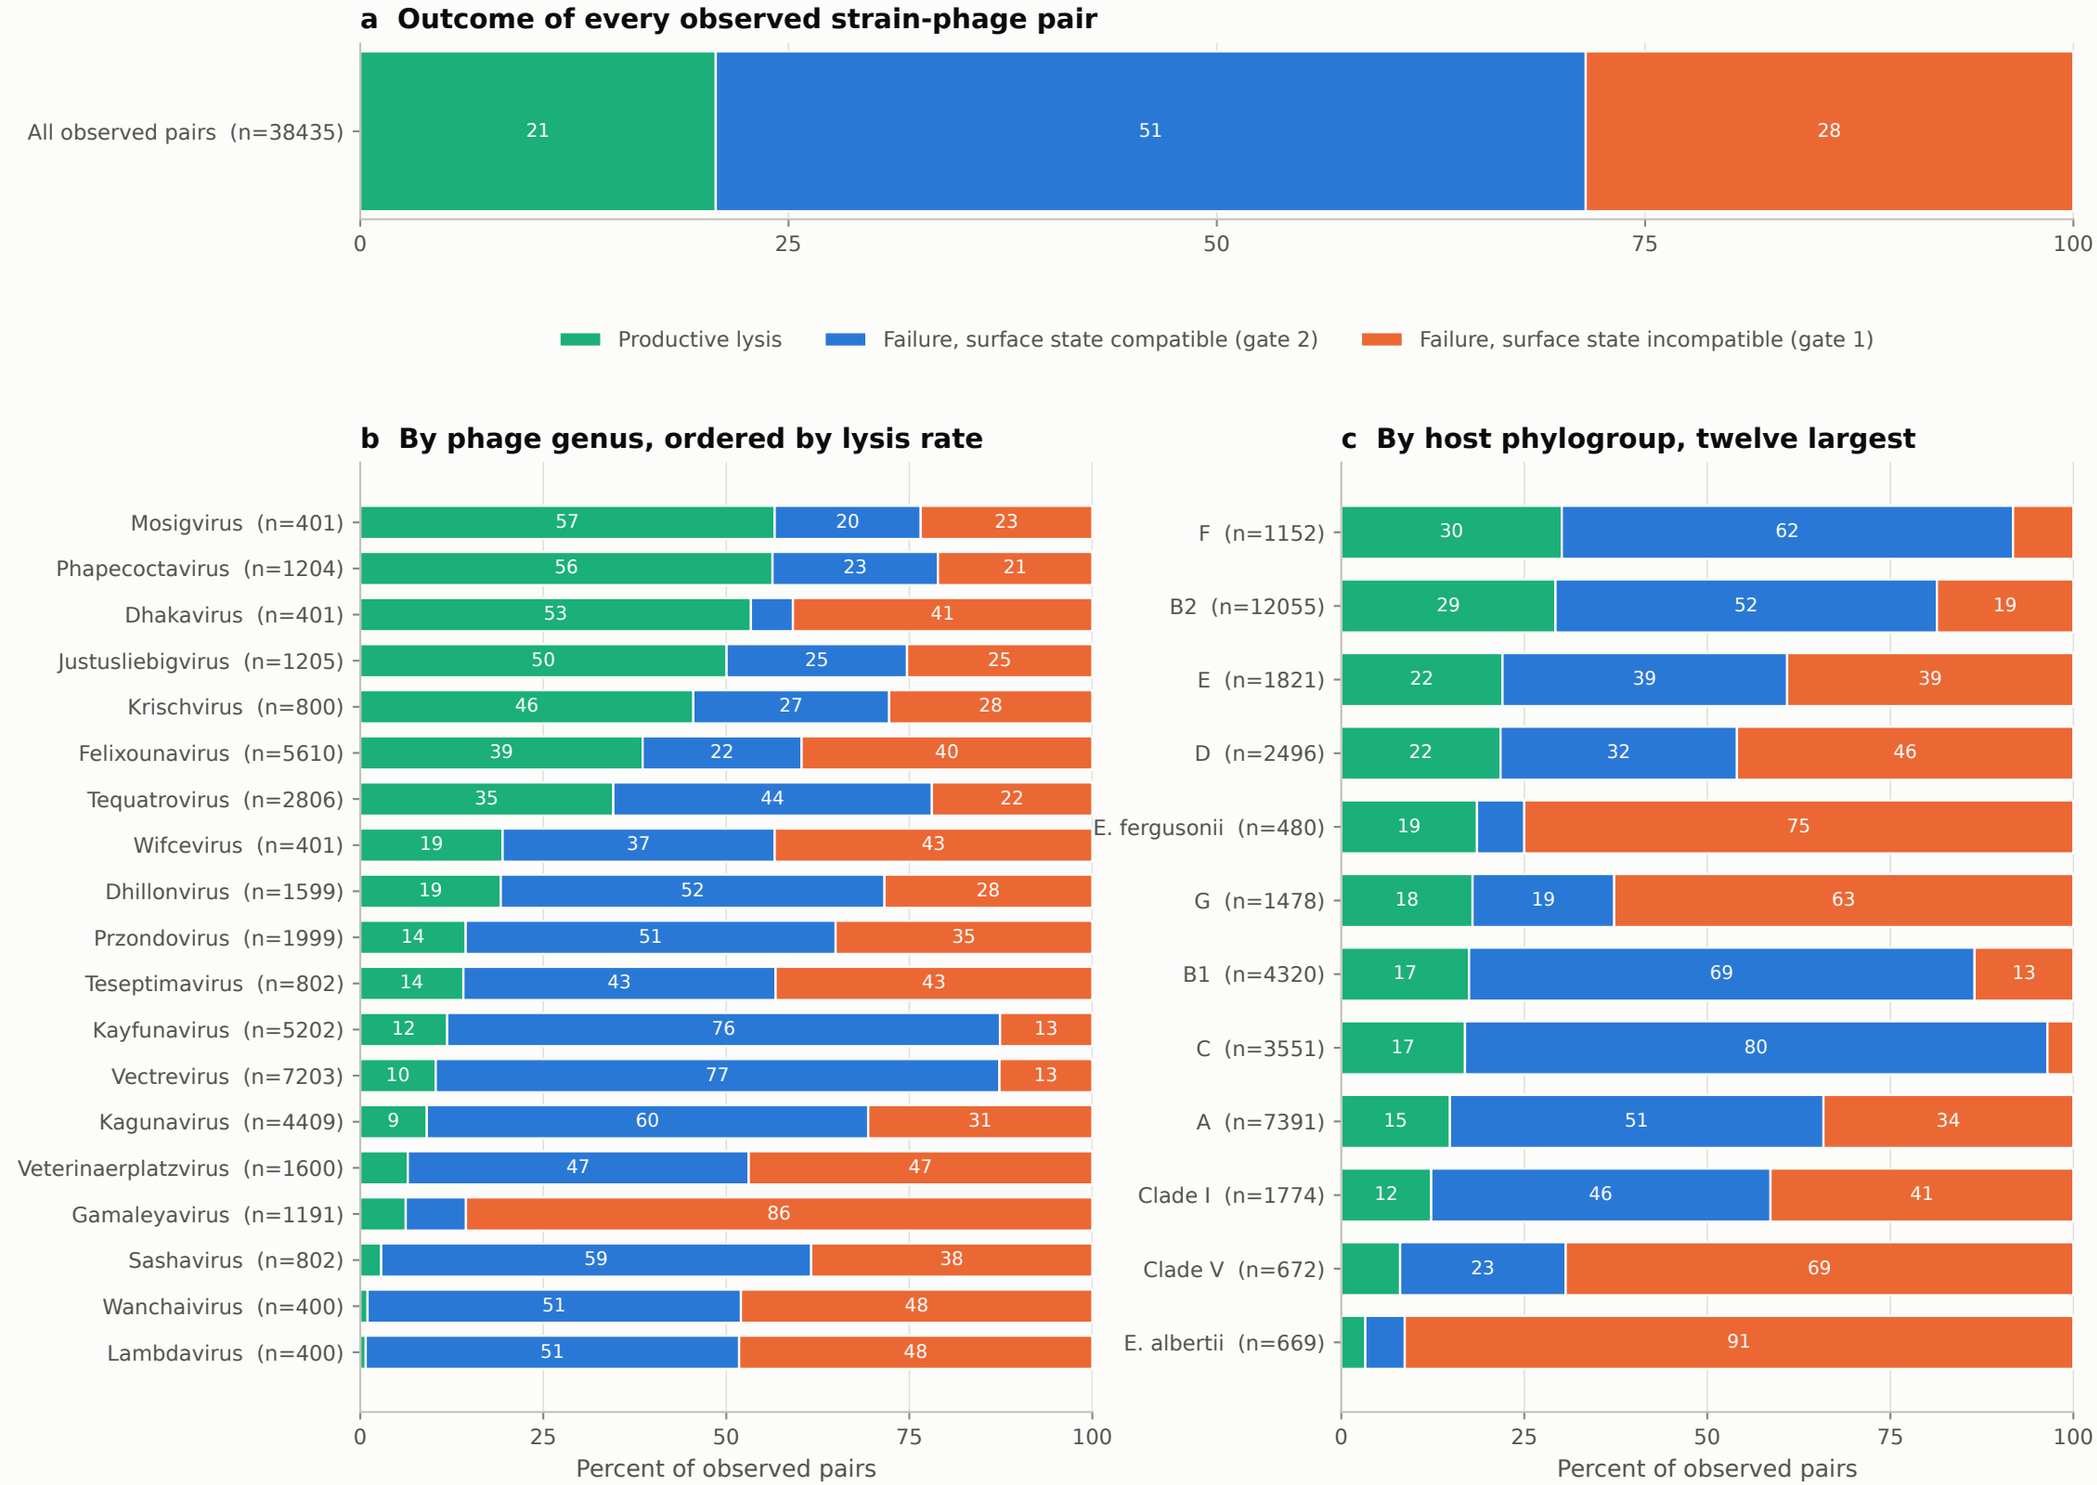
Figure 1. Surface exclusion accounts for a minority of failed infections


Receptor compatibility is inferred from the surface states of the strains each phage genus was isolated on, a definition that uses no information from the interaction outcomes. Of 30459 failed infections, 35.9 percent are excluded at the surface and 64.1 percent fail inside a compatible host. Numbers inside the bars are percentages.